

Health and safety risk assessment

(known as an APV in Danish)

With a health and safety risk assessment, it becomes easier to identify whether you have any problems relating to health and safety and helps you creating a good working environment.

It is a legal requirement for all companies with employees to conduct a health and safety risk assessment at least every three years. The health and safety risk assessment helps to evaluate both the physical and psychological work environment, identify areas for improvement, and develop action plans with recommended solutions on how to improve them. In this way, the health and safety risk assessment become an important tool to ensure that the workplace conditions support employees in performing their work in a safe and health-conscious manner.

At PrimaCare, we make it easy for companies to examine and work with the working environment - regardless of industry.

What you will get

- Online survey with the possibility of a customized questionnaire framework.
- Company report with detailed insight into employees' assessments of the physical and mental working environment.
- Presentation of results and highlighting of focus areas, along with advice and support regarding relevant interventions.
- Templates for creating action plans for any workplace environment issues.

